

Food and beverage products have become more complex and expensive to produce while globalisation and regulatory requirements continue to limit margins. To remain competitive, companies must find innovative ways to produce their products faster, at lower cost and with minimal waste. MPA Engineering has assisted a variety of businesses in gaining a competitive advantage through better control of the factory floor and better integration of manufacturing information. MPA Engineering's specialists provide a range of products and services such as project consulting, HSE compliance, design and installation of production processes, electrical maintenance support and parts (via Automation Sales) to food and beverage companies such as:
